4. Release Version Overview

This document defines the components that constitute the Converged Address Book (CAB) Version 1.0 Enabler.

The CAB is an evolution of the address book is expected to serve as a launch pad for similarly evolving services dependent upon contact information. In addition to traditional telecommunication features, the CAB will support new services on all-IP based networks featuring many innovative and flexible activities such as those which are emerging to facilitate peer-to-peer and community communications. As the CAB includes features that are not local to user devices, such as network storage and publication and subscription support, the need for interoperable functionality has established the need for the enabler.

The CAB Enabler will include the following:

- An extensible CAB data structure ensuring that it shall be able to incorporate data fields from existing formats (e.g., vCard specifications supported in today's devices)
 - Definition and organization of information related to contacts
 - Integration of other information to contact information like status
- Features which allow access from different networks and services
- Support for a user to provide his own up-to-date contact information to others, to populate their respective address book
- Provide access and synchronization for various devices registered by the same user across IP networks.
- A framework that allows interworking with available network based address book(s) provided by (for example) messaging and email services. This framework is expected to use standard data formats.
- Provide different views of CAB content depending on the context and/or the device.
- Contact Search - the ability to search contact information from both CAB system (i.e. PCC, AB data) and available external directories.
- Contact Share - allow CAB Users to send contact data to other users.
- Import non-CAB data - allow CAB Users to import contact information from non-CAB address book systems.
